Businesses are sprouting and blooming in the Meadowlands

In one office, Dr. Vincent Grasso is inspecting the one square inch chips he's going to implant in bracelets for recently discharged hospital patients that can remotely be monitored at home during physical therapy. A couple doors down, Yogi Sookhu stands in front of a dry erase board with blueprints of his real time data sharing technology for tide gates in the Meadowlands. Down the hall, John Mickowski is ready to fly out the door for a business meeting; a business plan that will enable his Tirebyter recycling equipment to be put in use...

...The list of ideas goes on and on. They're not your run-of-the-mill business plans, but everyone needs to start somewhere and where the principles of these ideas and the companies they run are getting their chance at stardom is right here in the Meadowlands ...
